

Please do not allow these banks to weaken Indiana's Telephone Privacy Laws by forcing Indiana to recognize the federal existing business relationship exception. Telemarketing calls are a nuisance and an invasion of privacy whether they come from a company who you already do business with or a stranger. Indiana's law is a great alternative for those people who do not want to allow calls from people they already do business with. People have a choice, they can choose the federal law with its exemptions, they can choose the State law with its more limited exemptions, they can choose to register under both or they can choose to register under neither. Thus, making Indiana's law conform to the federal by forcing it to include an "existing business" exemption, simply denies consumers the right to limit who may call based on the consumer's own private choice of who the consumer registers his phone number with.